America’s Arabs (Novel)
Author: Gladys Matar

Introduction: The protagonists of this novel are Arabs who live in Los Angeles in the USA. Their souls are heavy with sadness and regret and for that they blame their countries as being the reason for their immigration. They could not forget their countries but at the same time they did not get back to them and they could not be real Americans. Through this loss, Ameera – a Syria Professor – moves to Los Angeles to work in a research center. By joining that society, Ameera tells about the indirect interaction between the civil war in Syria and what is going on with those Arabs in America. The scenes of the novel keep moving between Syria and America showing the ugliness of the civil war in Syria and its tools that are: money, fanatism and media.

Sandalwood Perfume (Novel)
Author: Salah Maaty

Introduction: Bonja or Abu Alnaja is an Egyptian from Sudanese origin. After much travel and displacement between Egypt and Sudan, he found himself living in a small dark damp room in his hometown Juba the capital of South Sudan. Despite all suffering and cruelty, this engineer lives with the hope of being with his beloved, a girl from North Sudan who is sandal-scented. He dreams that one day he will build a bridge that connects the North and the South of Sudan, uniting the country and meeting his beloved.

The Two Dwellers Don’t Meet (Novel)
Author: Kinan Hammad

Introduction: The events of this novel take place in the streets of the old city of Damascus, known for its narrow alleys, its intimate atmosphere, and the abundance of jasmine, where lovers always walk. The narrator recalls his meetings with his beloved and their separation while he returns to old Damascus after years of immigration. During those memories, the city of Damascus appears as the true beloved whose love never ends. The novel is one of the most beautiful urban literature novels.

Escaping from Azrael’s Bus (Novel)
Author: Abeer Nader

Introduction: This novel is a message to humanity in every time and place so that we do not let souls lose their way in the painful material world. The protagonist of the novel is the soul of a woman who is transferred from her body in the current generation to a new body while she is on her deathbed in the hospital. Meanwhile, this soul recalls its previous life in another generation long time ago. These memories reflect the oppression of women in Eastern society through different ages.
Frames of Empiteness

Author: Dr. Amr Afia

A novel of two loves, Magic Realism and a man who has a conversation with his younger self. It's a novel about Shams el- Din who lives a life of imprisonment; he's imprisoned by the memory of his sister Qamar, his lost love through the years, Hayam, and finally his wife Soha. Shams travels to attend a scientific symposium abroad and when he comes back to Alexandria, fate puts him in a strange event that makes him wonder and also makes him doubt himself and his sanity. He enters a world of two Suns, and goes back to his memories of his family and his past. But, is this event a grace or a curse? Is there a way to get his loved ones back to life? Is it possible that a crazy chance might help him bring back a love that burned his soul? It is a novel about the fragility of the human existence and the disappointments of lovers and the disintegration of their souls. It's a trial of forgiveness. But will he be forgiven or get driven to madness and nothingness? It is a self journey of a man in search of himself and of a clear definition of the meaning of his life in a modern world that is changing too fast for any human being.

"A novel Frames from a Void by the novelist Dr. Amr Afia, I read it with great interest, starting from the writer's dedication to his sister to the end. The writer enjoyed a beautiful elegant style of narration, dominated by the classical Arabic language, with his Western culture merging between French, English and Spanish competently and without difficulty, in which he relies on the momentum of information he has from previous readings and coexist with Western society to a large extent. This makes the novel not less than any international novel in its scientific and literary level. “
Tamar
Author: Mai Khalid

What if your family had a mythical history? This novel will take you in a journey between two sisters: Tamar and Toqa, who are only sisters in name. Tamar lives in Garden City, the district of the rich. She is a lover of fashion and history, while Toqa lives in El Darb el Ahmar, a district of the common people. Toqa is strictly religious and devout. The plot takes place in Cairo and in Georgia where Tamar tries to uncover the history of her family and achieve her career. She faces so many obstacles during this journey. But, what about Toqa and her inner conflict with Tamar? Will she do as her sister did and give up to the reality she is living? Tamar is a novel that will take us through the streets of old Cairo, and El Darb El Ahmar specifically, which is one of the oldest neighborhoods in Egypt. Threads of history and old Egyptian traditions entwine with the modern atmosphere of the novel.

“The idea of the novel is beautiful and it is a combination of history, sewing and the world of fashion”

Prisoner of Muscat
Author: El-Sherbini Ashour

A Semi-autobiography mixed with nostalgia, comedy and political satire. It tells the story of an Egyptian journalist who is held up in the Muscat Airport following the orders of the Qatar Interpol. He is not told why he is not allowed to travel and is later on arrested and sent to a prison in Muscat. However, during his wait in the airport, he starts writing his autobiography and bit by bit we are introduced to the time when he used to live and work in Qatar. It’s an interesting depute novel which tells the story of an unfortunate man who has upset so many important people. Despite all this, the novel is told in a light tone and carries so many funny scenes.

“The novel is really beautiful, and carries a lot of irony and ugliness of reality. Perhaps its magnificence lies in the fact that it is a personal memory of the writer, but it is a memory of a single day filled with many trials and hardships. I liked the writer’s opinions and his expression of the reality of our Arab world And a little of the hardships of alienation that many people experience. I really enjoyed it and despite its lightness, it is rich in its meanings and ideas.”

“It is more than just a novel; It is pure art It attracts you from the beginning to the end Makes you present at its events I enjoyed reading it so much, and I will never tire of reading it again.”

Gymnasium
Author: Mai Khalid

The main character is a girl who won a trip to a writer’s residence in Switzerland. Once she gets there, she starts writing her first novel. All her life she has been dreaming of becoming like her neighbour who is a famous writer, who also used our heroine as a secondary character in all of her books. The writer is Bedaya El Alfy. So, when our heroine reaches Switzerland, she uses Bedaya El Alfy in her novel as well. What is ironic is that our heroine shares the same first name; Bedaya Mahran. She writes a story about two groups of women in a Gymnasium. The first group is a high class ladies who goes to the gym to spend their times, and the second one is the women working there. Every woman has a chapter for her own story, and every now and then more than one character’s life connects at some point. The plot moves smoothly and coherently, with a chapter in Egypt and a chapter in Switzerland. The reader will notice how some details in the characters’ lives are similar to Bedaya Mahran’s life. What is also remarkable about her, in addition to its feminist nature, is the intertextuality the author uses in Gymnasium.

“Mai Khaled writes about dreams and reality in an overlapping narrative and beautiful language”
In Blue Ink
Author: Hisham Kheshen
The novel is written in the epistolary format/technique. Lydia Stone is an English young woman who is recruited by the British government in the late 1860’s to serve as a governess for the Egyptian Princess Nazli Fadel & concurrently report to the then equivalent of the British secret service on the happenings of the entourage of her father, the exiled brother of Ismail, Khedive of Egypt.

Through a series of 15 letters Lydia relates lots of untold history of the Mohamed Aly dynasty while sharing the story of her travels over the 40 years she spent as a companion of the Princess during the belle epoque era.

To augment that Sydney Boyd a British agent of the newly established MI5 in 1914 shares his diary. Through his diary entries the story culminates with Lydia being in London and incidents happening to her and her unidentified young companion Rezk.

Through the letters and the diary entries we learn about Miss Stone’s long-lost son (to whom she had been addressing her writings). And the drama continues as Mr. Boyd locates the son as well as dismantles the bizarre situations Lydia finds herself in.

In Blue Ink is a novel that tells a lot of palaces’ secrets and untold or rather ignored history of the period. Through the novel the greatness of Princess Nazli Fadel is elaborated upon and her profound influence on great Egyptian leaders of her time is perhaps shared for the first time. She is a major player in the cultural & political landscape of Egypt at the turn of the 20th century that had not got her dues.

The novel ends with Ms. Stone returning to Egypt to spend what’s left of her life while leaving behind other twists to complement an extremely enticing read.

The Last Mass
Author: Walaa Kamal
After an abusive and devastating marriage, Mary -a European convert- remarried and carried out a terrorist attack at her hometown’s cathedral, killing over 50 people. Throughout his journey of recollection, her ex-husband, the narrator, goes back to where everything had started and ended: Mary’s Hometown, searching for the truth. This confrontational novel discusses imperative historic and existential issues: the east/west dilemma, bullying, extremism, and the role of art amidst all this human and ideological chaos.
Warathat Aal al-Sheikh
Author: Ahmed Al-Qarmalawi

In Warathat Aal al-Sheikh, the narrator is wholly engaged in an inherited myth, passed down through several generations of his own family; the myth claims that a male descendent of the family, called Muhammad the seventh, would one day uncover a golden treasure guarded by a scabby monkey. He begins to search the history of his extended family, fetching every piece of information available about his ancestors, and, meanwhile, he tries to fulfill the requirements of immigration to Australia, aiming to catch up with his work companion, who left him behind to suffer alone the breakdown of the construction market in Egypt after 2011.

During his course of action, the narrator becomes totally absorbed by the past of his ancestors, reconstructing theirs lives and filling the gaps to tell their stories, which extend for more than a hundred years.

The structure of the novel builds on the alteration between past and present, in a manner that imitates random brush strokes, to picture the changes that occurred in Cairo from late nineteenth century to the present. The narration also alternates among several characters/ancestors from three generations: Sidqi Bek, the Capital Security Head, who gets shot dead during the 1919 riots; his brother Fadel who leads a life indulged in pleasures, until he departs from home one day and becomes a dervish; their sister, Ne‘mat, who leaves home to start a new life in the deserted Land; Nash‘at who fights alongside the British and falls in love with an Armenian immigrant; Zebeida who finds her passion in fashion and style, before she loses interest in everything following the sudden death of her husband; Hussein who starts the family Printery, his crippled brother Hassan who dies in jail; several stories told in short, equally-divided chapters, that interlace through 280 pages of rhythmic narration, to create the feeling of the constant flow of time.

Our writer racked his brain to invent a unique-looking cat that becomes the hero of a tale full of adventure. Our writer couldn't but develop feelings with his protagonist. He got worried as his lively cat faced some difficulties. Yet he didn't interfere. And when the cat was brave and independent enough to face its own problems, our writer gets rest assured for this closure. But it didn't end here.

  “Just a great story, lovingly illustrated, or is it a non-fiction book, how classified? I think both. It’s a good story. But it’s also factual history how authors develop a book. Idea, figure, plot - the fight with the figures, putting them in their place. Find an end. But the figure stays forever. On top of that, there are instructions for children to use this common thread to find their own story.”
Goodbye
Author: Nabiha Mheidly

After happily living with her parents, the little girl suddenly has her world turned upside down. She is now wandering around each of her mother's and father's houses; she is crying each time she has to say goodbye to one of her parents. The little girl is blaming herself for this problem. One day, she decided to fight her frustration and to search for happiness again. Along the way and as she was playing puzzle assembly with her friend, the little girl finally realized that it’s not her fault and she no longer felt sad with each “Goodbye”.

“The delicate and subtle text is well served by the tender illustrations of Loujayna al-Assil. The choice of color palette is relevant: after separation, the mother’s world takes on ocher shades and that of the father turns to blue hues: a clear materialization of the break. A book that will help tackle a serious theme that is increasingly present in the youth edition of the Arab World.”

Street From Above
Author: Nabiha Mheidly

This book walks us through a little girl's moments of reflection. Looking down from her window, she relives each moment into a busy scenario through time, only to be viewed by the eye of the reader.

“The rhyming text accompanies the pace of pedestrians. The illustrations appear as small tables where the details of the scenes are delicately reproduced. We go from the overall plan of the street to the close-up on the shoes of passers-by. The sepia colors chosen by the designer are available in nuances and highlight beautiful contrasts of light and shade. An album of great finesse and beautiful poetry, which received the Etisalat Prize in 2014.”

IBBY Europe https://www.ibby-europe.org/node/382
“The text, which is in rhyme, suggests the rhythm of pedestrians’ footsteps. Each illustration is like a painting full of fine detail. The sepia colours chosen by the artist give us subtle and beautiful contrasts of light and shade. A picture book of rare delicacy and gorgeous poetry.

The Gospel According To Temple Prostitute
Author: Osama Alayasa

The writer returns to the story of Judah and Tamar, in the Old Testament, to judge, simulate and question the reality, three thousand years after the supposed time of the story, which divided people into those who consider Tamar a saint, and those who consider her an adulteress. In the novel, Tamar, the Canaanite, herself talks and presents her story about her lover, the son of Judah, with whom the Lord gets angry because of their national and religious differences, so He kills the husband. Hence, she marries his brother, with whom the Lord gets angry not because he has married a woman from a different nation and religion, but rather - this time - because he does not satisfy the Lord’s desire to have children, so the Lord kills him too. With a series of interesting and dramatic events, in which heaven interferes in the affairs of the earth, and marginalizes Tamar, because she is a woman, a widow, and from a different religion, she decides to determine her own destiny, and give birth to a son from Judah himself, in order to preserve the lineage. For the first time, Tamar tells her story, in a novel that discusses patriotic, nationalist, and religious prejudices, as well as the love that transcends tribal borders. The novelist made an effort to present an oriental world that existed thousands of years ago, through a tale that inflamed the imagination of Renaissance artists.

The Apartment in Passy Street
Author: Raji Bathish

Between the years 2001-2019 there is an entire history during which the concept of being a refugee changed, and the relationship between the Eastern Mediterranean and Europe became more complex and charged. In 2001, Jamil and Amir emigrate to Paris after the outbreak of the Second Intifada and the events of October 2000 in the Galilee (where Israeli police killed 13 Palestinian protestors inside Israel), in pursuit of a better life somewhere that can accept them for being different. More precisely, they go in search of rich, influential partners, who have lots of money and full ownership of apartments in the French capital’s fancy, upscale neighborhoods. But realizing the dream of living there in comfortable conditions turns into a race to grab one single opportunity that comes up just once, at the same time as the onset of the symptoms of AIDS in one of them. So, one has to steal it from the other without hesitation to ensure that both do not miss out on it. The two friends part ways less than a year after their arrival and then meet by chance 18 years later.

The Body’s Schizophrenia
Author: Wesam Almadani

It is the story of lesbian Arabic women in her journey of understanding and living the conflict in side her between what she really is and how the Arabic society wants her to act. This is the main motive for all the actions in the novel. the reader will have a look inside the Arabic society through the stories of other women crossing her life.

There are two narrators for the novel. The first is the young doctor who finds her diary and reads it, and the second is the soul of the woman who finds herself hanging between life and death when her body enters a coma. The importance of the second narrator (the soul) appears when this soul reveals the secrets of the words that she was too conservative to reveal in the diary. The novel is the journey of this soul to find salvation and enlightenment in the middle of delusion and darkness. Shall she live as a woman born to be a false woman, or to be the hidden real man that no one sees? Then the novel ends leaving the reader with the big question was all this real or just in the mind of the heroin only? I divided the novel into 11 Chapters puls the blue chapter. The first eight chapters have titles like (the first lie - the second lie ....) Then the last three ones named the beginning/ the middle/the whole truth. After the fourth chapter I put the blue chapter which contains parts of real Facebook pages about homosexual their secret society and their problems in the Arabic countries written in their own dialect.

Ember of Swam
Author: Ghassan Chebaro

The young generation is the ember of the swamp where the people are surviving their daily humiliation, demanding their legal rights, and urging their fellow citizens to struggle to recover these rights. Nidal, who is angry from the injustice and humiliation he is facing daily, wants to leave the country to the USA, backed by his cousin who is an American citizen. But, all of a sudden his cousin calls him crying that he is kicked out of his home because of the Mortgage Crisis which hit the U.S. in 2007. Nidal opens the TV to check the news, and is struck by a scene of a coloured girl burning the American flag because of the discrimination she is facing daily, but the police hits her and leaves her bleeding. All of a sudden, Nidal realizes that injustice is almost everywhere, and it is better for him to stay home and try to make his country a better place, rather than turn into a number in the U.S.A.

The hero of the novel is government employee who is supposed to examine publications, suppress their writers imagination and "out of line" ideas. But the hero falls in a dilemma when he wakes up one morning to find himself a reader, who wants to know the meaning of things, questioning our existence to become addicted to the forbidden novels and their ideas.
Liberating Desire
Author: Fatiha Morchid

Once again, Fatiha Morchid sheds light on marginalized communities and taboos in our Arab societies, exposing shortcomings and contradictions.

As usual, modernity is at the heart of her narrative, which seeks to express in its profound human dimension, man's desire to affirm his individuality and his difference.

In a poetic style, the novel tells Az Eddine's story and his desire to free himself from a body that does not reflect his true sexual identity, while recounting the process of his physical transformation.

It is a bold narrative which confronts readers with questions about the concepts of masculinity and femininity, sex and gender, and brings them closer to the reality of sexual minorities.

What Sin Caused Her to Die?
Author: Mohammed El maazouz

What Sin Caused her to die? is a call to return to philosophy, goodness and beauty in the fight against ugly distortions of human nature. Despite her divorce, Raheel is determined to remain hopeful.

Having always found refuge in reading Sartre and Le Beauvoir, and contemplating the worlds of music, philosophy and human freedom, she determines to reengage with the world and resist depression through music. Her mother had tried to do the same through drawing and painting, although she committed suicide, leaving her young daughter behind. Raheel chooses to use her freedom to play and sing, sowing a last seed of hope.

The Wind Phone
Author: Mariam Michtawi
The Wind Phone is the story of a girl who remembers her late teacher and addresses him with great sadness. Intertwined with the story are other stories, including the story of her lost love, which was once her sanctuary. And strong glimpses of the Lebanese and Iraqi revolution. The novel belongs to the genre of Arab magical realism, and this is evident from the miraculous thread that braids the events together. And the story of the old woman who stuck to many threads.

My Father’s City
Author: Kafa Al Zoghbi
It is the city where Nabil came to bury his father. It is the city that his father abandoned after he failed it, and he kept longing for it. In it Nabil met Sana, and went with her on a path whose horizon in the distance seems narrow, but it expands as they progress. And there he met the ghost of a man who could have been his father: This man did not fail the city, did not desert it, and held fast in its prisons; a tormented ghost wanders in a dark city shackled by the constancy of time, reason and language.
Kafa Al Zoghbi: A Jordanian novelist who has published several novels.

Dihya’s Many Smells
Author: Tarik Bakari
One of two things would have brought him back to Sanhaja, his Amazigh village: His mother death who ruined his childhood or the return of Najma, Haji Bernard's wife, his first passion, his forbidden love who disappeared under mysterious circumstances. And here he has finally returned, after a quarter of a century of absence, with great political and literary glory, to rearrange his inner chaos.
But the place inflames his emotions which get shaken by his frined Mustafa's fanaticism, and provoked by the smells of Dehya, a Spanish tourist of Berber origin.
And the never answered question of today: Do we ever heal in exile?
Tarik Bakari: Moroccan novelist and professor of Arabic literature. “The General’s Mirrors” and “The Blond Killer” have been published by Dar Al-Adab.

For the Love of Life
Author: Alawieh Sobh
At the moment of Youssef’s departure, a fiery memory, led by a convulsive body, opens. Basma’s cramps increase, but Youssef’s picture always brings a smile. Between the memory of a past paved with loss and love, and a harsher present of crumbling Arab cities, Basma clings to her body that never stops betraying her. Who said that our bodies are not like the stories of our cities? And who among us knows if our last dance is a farewell dance, or a new beginning?
Alawiya Sobh: A Lebanese novelist. Published by Dar Al-Adab: Maryam of the Stories», «Donia», and «They name it Passion». Maryam of the Stories was published in German by Suhrkamp and in French by Gallimard.

One Hundred Thrills
Author: Rola Al Jordi
Inside the story of Lama, who is looking for her lover Jalal, two tales go in opposite directions: her grandfather’s colorful tale with nostalgia for ancient Tripoli, Lebanon and the tale of Mardiros, the frightened and homeless Armenian, and the most beautiful sufi vocalist. From Tripoli to Aleppo. Then Pennsylvania, tales travel to paint pictures of joy and cruelty. Of forbidden rapture and vague love.
Rola Al-Jordi: Lebanese poet and writer. She is a professor of Islamic history at McGill University in Canada. She published a novel by Dar Al-Adab entitled: In the Light Box.
In this book, the purpose is to address politics and not religion. We strive herein to connect prophecy to politics, from the one hand, and to a make a split between them, from the other hand. Although, prophecy is a conclusive command, politics is a pure elective choice, setting your sights by logic and reason on trial-and-error. The Prophet’s political biography in Madinah is unlike His prophetic biography in Makkah, without thus denoting a prophecy interruption. Mohammed, in Makkah, was devoted to Prophecy, but in Madinah, He played this double role of Prophet and chief commander. As though, in politics and fighting, He had those genius merits unlike no other commander in the history. Mohammed alone, among the world’s leaders, successfully established a great and powerful empire, from absolutely nothing, and preached for a consistent, deeply rooted, and widespread ecumenical religion, constantly speaking for itself, in so many ways, and even on our present-day.

It is, thus, an attempt, to read in the politics the Mohammed apprehended in the Madinah's environment and circumstances. His political biography reflects the ingenuity of His genius, His insight, and devotion to Allah and His advocacy. It is in fact a wealthy and diversified biography.

This book is an attempt to shed light on the human, leadership, experiences, skills and creations of the Prophet under the conditions that secure His victory, in support of His religious advocacy.
East on the Silk Road
Author: Dr. Tariq Ahmed Shams
This study is about the Silk Road, which was the long trade route connecting the East and West Asia to Europe and Africa, to reveal its importance, both commercially, economically and even politically, and its civilizational role and significant impact on the lands through which the routes passed, along this vital aisle that was, for thousands of years, the only trading hub between the countries of the ancient and medieval worlds.
This same road managed to connect the ancient and medieval worlds to the contemporary
This road was able to connect the ancient and medieval worlds to the contemporary. During the 21st century, after a long struggle with the Western imperialism, the war with Japan, the World War I and II, and the internal civil war, some Chinese came out with the new Silk Road, the “Belt and Road” initiative, which facilitates China’s trade with 65 countries embracing 60% of the world’s population.

The Curse of Cain
Natural Gas Wars in Russia, Iran, Qatar, Lebanon, and Syria
Author: Kamal Dib
This book “The Curse of Cain Natural Gas Wars in Russia, Iran, Qatar, Lebanon, and Syria”, by Kamal Dib, covers a major shortcoming in the Ara library. It sets out a brief background on a crucial topic, every researcher, journalist, officer, and reader, having a special interest in public matters, needs to know.
Wars for gas are not about military battles, missiles, and fleets. They are, in fact, more complicated, starting as a conflict over gas sources and supply routes, and scarred by endless wars from Central Asia to Syria, Ukraine and Africa marked by legal confrontations, sanctions, and boycotts between States and corporations.
In the 21st century, Arabs were cursed for the second time by natural gas. Syria, Libya, Yemen, Iraq and Egypt, as well as Lebanon and Palestine, the Arab peoples and the Arab countries have become fuel in the “gas wars”. Here again, the West got princes who have plenty of gas and who accept to be “accomplices” in killing other Arabs.
Aydoun
Author: Kawthar Al Jahmi

The novel opens on Ghazala and her daughter Hasnaa’s disappearance. As the eponym statue of “Al hasnaa’ wa al ghazala” (the beauty and the gazelle) disappears from a square in the Libyan capital, Tripoli, at the same time, rumors have it that the two women have been kidnapped. Ghazala, a well-known liberal media freelancer from the 1990s, widow of a soldier lost in Chad, had recently moved her daughter from her in-laws, to live with her. Hasnaa, a blogger and activist in post 2011 Tripoli, was vocally criticizing the “Libyan revolution”, which, she could very well see, would not lay down the grounds for a better future.

As the reader discovers the story of Hasnaa and Ghazala, and solves the mystery of their disappearance, the novel reveals the nooks and crannies of a complex Libyan society, thereby depicting with sensitivity and detail, a country of accumulated devastation.

Beethoven’s Hat
Author: Rami Tawil

The bet persists, so do losses. Every move he makes, except chasing after the ball, carried him some loss...
As a child, he got addicted to playing football with bare feet and reading secretly trying to reduce the spaces around him and saving what open spaces can waste.

Between the stick of the military education instructor who used to beat him when he was at high school, and the blow he received on his face from a woman he had abandoned when he was over fifty, there are many wars, waiting for a crazy war that burns lottery papers over which for forty years have failed to carry any of them the grand prize.
The Maids of the Shrine
Author: Mona Al Shammari
On a dark cursed night, the bloated corpse of a pregnant woman was beached on Vilka Island, Kuwait. But the will of the shrine master, Al Khodr, the miracles of whom people await, and the wrath of whom people fear, was different. Thus, life came out in the middle of death, and the baby was born, the “son of the maqam”.
Azba knows that this story is nothing but a fable Maria keeps alive, she who turned her life around to become the lady of the shrine. The child will grow at the hands of the maids of the shrine, awaiting his destiny, in the midst of the people of Vilka, who are mired in battles of love, betrayal, sorcery and trade.

The Touaregs (Or Blue Men)
Author: Omar Al Ansari
The Touaregs (or blue men as they are called) can be traced back to The Pharaohs of Egypt, and are deeply rooted within the Arab region. However, like other minorities in Arab countries, they are marginalized and unrecognized, deprived of their political and social rights, and almost erased from the collective memory of Arabs. Who are they, and why did they call them "the blue men"?
Through this book, "The blue men" tackles the poorly known history of this people of the desert, their tales, secrets and legends, their customs and traditions, and the specificity of their society, which has resisted any attempt to urbanization.

The white Line of the Night
Author: Khaled Nasrallah
Having spent his turning the pages of his favorite books, and his youth as a proofreader, the Editor suffers when a book is censored, and gets deeply annoyed when forced to reject some of the taboo works that appeal to him.
Being drawn to rather controversial novelists, wishing to get rid of the boundaries set upon him, The Editor decides to use the printing press that he inherited from his father. The Editor now finds himself on the other side, and is eventually hunted down.
Khaled Al Nasrallah offers a smartly weaved narrative, which tackles the sensitive topic of censorship in the cultural industry in Kuwait, and of publishing in particular.
Blood of the Bull
Author: Nizar Chakroun
The Lost Chapter of «Khalilah wa Dimnah».
The novel reveals the adventure of three Arab archaeologists traveling to Iraq in the late 1990s, during the siege of Baghdad, when it was under the rule of Saddam Hussein, to excavate its lasting monuments. They go there as members of an archaeological expedition. They are accompanied by a mysterious Spanish photographer.
The journey turns into a search for the lost chapter of Kalīlah wa Dimnah [Panchatantra], by Abdullah ibn al-Muqaffa [Rūzbih], leading some of them thus to an unknown fate.
In the process, the characters’ worlds are revealed, and their individual and private life stories are engraved, through evoking their cultures, ideas and opinions about life, humanity, love and war. These biographies, however, come into conflict the problem of how to view Arab cultural history and, eventually, how to re-read it. Taking the form of a narrative in which action and speech are committed to animals, the novel calls for re-thinking the intentions of Khalilah wa Dimnah, for considering the possibility of the version in circulation being incomplete, and for deliberating on the ‘fidelity’ of historical records. There is also a suggestion that an essential chapter of the novel is missing, and that that chapter, as the novel suggests, contained audacious remarks against the Sultan of the time and was, eventually, the reason behind the murder of the author—Ibn al-Muqaffa.
The work also invokes other serious questions. Those questions concern of the nature of the relationships between intellectuals and politicians; justice; freedom of thinking and expression; questioning those “historical givens” that have always dominated oral traditions and have always been taken for granted; and the possibility, and likelihood, of the subjection of historical facts and truths to the manipulations of official culture!
The work is captivating; however, narrative is suspenseful, language is delicate and gets close to that of captivating movies, and action and style arouse both thought and emotion.

Letters from Exile
Author: Badriya Hamad

“Letters from Exile” Mirror of the Good Generation by Qatari writer Badriya Hamad, it is a message of love, pain, meeting and separation, memoirs of a child, a young woman and a woman from (the generation of the good people) dedicated to the generation (2000) who’ve heard immortals, but does not know about the old generations life and that beautiful era with all its pros and cons. The generation of the fifties, sixties and seventies, among them, lived through the beginnings of the establishment of the new state, after the impact of oil revenues on the form of life, and they were among the founders of that state. Who were aware of the world and everything modern that was available at the beginning of the state’s openness to the world and the impact of this on the thinking of young people and their swing between adherence to the old habits of society and manifestations of openness at that time, until a religious awakening swept the country in the early eighties and coincided with an evolution in the living standard of citizens that led to Gradual change in the forms of social relations as well as the way of life, and gradually the features of the lives of the good people are receding, the simplicity of living, the equality of the social level and the strength of bonding began to hill. Little by little, the distance, the cost, and the competition in social aspects, and the educational and occupational level began to appear gradually until it dominated the form of life in the nineties.

Letters from Exile documenting the world of women decades ago and those mutual views between the female and society, which carry many of the warnings listed by it and a lot of fear and hesitation on its part, then all of the above makes us wonder what is the fate of those innocent feelings and feelings that every human being must have. What about her? This is the hidden part that the writer made spoken in the novel.

Our Family Without An Heir
Author: Hashem Al Sayed

“Our family without an heir” is the research novel in the basic biography, and in this vein, and until the novel ends, it returns to the beginning, to the issue of wandering, diaspora, and the search for origins and paternity. On this approach, the steps of the novel and its intertwined events proceeded to make the reader anticipate and anxious for the outcome of the events until the end. And if you start quietly until the rhythm gradually increases.

Fruits of Heart
Author: Jaber Ateeq

A life with love, money and other things..

The novel «The Fruits of Heart» by the Qatari writer Jaber Ateeq. In his novel, the writer monitors the conditions and destinies of his characters in the search for happiness and success in work and in the establishment of a personality and life in a framework of obstacles and contradictions, some succeed in surmounting and others fail. The writer says: When you write about reality and confine yourself to your community, you find that most of the ideas are consumed and have been touched upon, whether in a novel, television or theatrical work. I link this issue out of the blue, for the materialism of society sometimes forces you to paint the picture of money beautifully, not in order to give it a value greater than its size, but rather in order to establish that money is a means and not an end that we seek.

Each character in the novel deals with a specific issue, which I put forward with my personal perceptions, from the accumulation of experience, watching and some readings, the view of women, the value of things, the value of happiness, emotional relationships, the woman who sacrifices for her children, moral and behavioral deviation, charitable works, the value of women as a human being with his feelings And his desires and whims, the relationship of sex that she linked to passion as a complement to the relationship of a man and a woman in its proper framework.

I quickly set out in this novel, as its characters, the rich girl and the madman, the silent lover, and the struggling young man, what connects them and how each character changes, the little things that can affect us deeply and completely change our lives without being prepared, our relationships and how we build and destroy them, all These things fascinated me as I wrote them, but I suffered a lot at the end of the novel. The ideas are there and I could fill the pages with more exciting events, but I saw that I would distort the picture I drew if I added more events, because the state of stability when it occurs does not collapse quickly, or to say that we hold on in the state of stability so that we can continue to live comfortably.

Secretary Bird
Author: Mohamed Sulieman Elfaki Al Shazly

Secretary bird is a novel by Mohamed Sulieman Elfaki Al Shazly published in 2020. It tells the story of Salah Abdalmajid, a young Sudanese journalist attached to a fighting military unit during the Sudanese Civil War.

The novel graphically describes the inhumaneness of the Sudanese Civil War focusing on the period from 1987 to 1989. In the Safha camp, Salah Abdalmajid encounters the Secretary bird, a professional ruthless officer. Salah Abdalmajid’s sensitivity clashes with the day-to-day shocks. He fails to report to the newspaper. The novel chronicles Abdalmajid’s days of arrest by the Southern rebels. Secretary bird is the first novel that portrays and depicts the horrors of the Sudanese civil war. Approximately, two million people died as a result of war, famine, and disease caused by the conflict. Four million people in southern Sudan were displaced. The civilian death toll is one of the highest of any war since World War II and was marked by frequent human rights violations, including slavery and mass killings.

The Eyes of the Horses
Author: Sidi Ould Al-Amjad

This poetry collection (The Eyes of the Horses) by the poet Sidi Ould Al-Amjad represents the most important transformations of the poetic discourse of the new generation in the Mauritanian poems since the mid-eighties, in an artistic style that combines both the techniques of the modern poem and the heritage poem in form and content. His poems deal with the Mauritanian reality, such as the woman's work in the poem (The Fish Seller) and the slavery liberation in the poem (Dreams of the Boy Mahmoud). The poet’s vision in it, stems from the aesthetics of the universe, life and human. “Ouyun El Khail” is an other name of Chinguetti, in the ancient Berber language. An old and famous city in Mauritania, classified by the UNESCO as a world cultural heritage for humanity, and is visited by thousands of tourists annually. It is one of the oldest caravan cities in the Mauritanian desert.

Iraqi Character
Unpacking Patterns, Variations, Reshaping
A study in the sociology and psychology of contemporary Iraqi society
Author: Sayyar AL-Jamil
This book tells about the Iraqi character, its diversity, and its difficult formation.
There are questions this book is trying to find answers to, including: The transformations that affected the Iraqi personality? What is the extent of the scientific awareness that hit it? What is the significance of that? What is the size of mental illness that plagued the Iraqi society?
In this book, we present treatments for personality, analyze its various psychologies and study what is negative and harmful to society, and what is positive and righteous in society.

Pilgrims Between the Formal Dialectic and the Deliberative Dialectic

Author: Dr. Rabia Al Arabi Ashraf Fouad

An overview of the geography of argumentative approaches shows that they were concerned with two aspects: the theoretical aspect based on the logical dimension, and the practical aspect based on the rhetorical dimension. However, this type of approach of both types is absent from the normative dimension. Hence the special importance of this book, which presents to the Arab reader two theories that have been absent from the field of Arab studies that dealt with Hajjaj: the formal dialectical theory and the deliberative dialectical theory. The originality of these two theories is due to their monitoring of the mechanisms that activate the production and interpretation of the argumentative discourse, based on the dialectical dimension as an institutional and specific dimension.

Introduction

If communication and exchanging information is a characteristic that is not restricted to the human species alone, then Hajjaj is a human characteristic par excellence. Therefore, we proceed in this book from the assumption that the structure of the pilgrims is a structure encoded in the human mind. From here we insist that it forms a template among the structural templates of human languages. It is deeply rooted in the history and psychological formation of man. Therefore, we find that it has branched out into a number of stereotypes, and it has taken the form of charts and statements through its historical path. Hence, the successful argumentative discourse is the discourse that follows in its course the argumentative stereotype rooted in the structure of the human mind.
The thinking at the heart of the research thesis in the “political reference in the novel” is based on an intellectual and critical conviction that: the imaginary worlds that build the references of the novel have relationships with human existence; Whether in his individual signifying being, or in his life-becoming, or in the system of his various relationships. However, the link of the textual reference to “human reality” remains a link of coding and representation, and not a link of verification and actual existence. Therefore, the critical preoccupation with the issue of the "political reference" that builds the novel, with its imagination, its narrative logic and its aesthetic tools, is considered a preoccupation with the world of the political life of the individual and society, but as a world built in a language that makes its conformity with what is actually achieved difficult to comprehend.

Introduction
The novel is a narrative art based on imagination in constructing its worlds, and politics is described as "the art of the possible." From here, it is possible to talk about the imagined possible; As the possible refers to politics, and the imaginary expresses the “world” built by the textual reference of the novel. For this, the imagined possible indicates the imagined politics according to the requirements of the narrative creativity of the novelist.

In the Eloquence of the Pilgrims Towards a rhetorical Approach to Pilgrims
Author: Dr. Mohamed Mechbal

This book seeks to present rhetoric not as a knowledge of pilgrims only, but as a method for analyzing pilgrims in discourse. For this reason, the perspective that was presented here was combined with a question that occupied the researcher from his first book (1993) to his last book (2015): How can we use rhetoric techniques in analyzing different rhetorical patterns and types? What is the state of rhetoric as it forges an unfamiliar path? Doesn't she find herself, having explored new horizons, compelled to constantly renew herself and develop her tools?

Introduction

Until the time of the use of this compound word: “Al-Balaghah Al-Hajjaj” or “Al-Balaghah Al-Hajjaj” is one of the things that, if you do not realize it on its face, its awareness with it, values at least that did not receive attention and appreciation, a deep knowledge rooted in history and visuals of people's affairs and branched into various sciences and knowledge: Logic, Philosophy, Politics, Psychology, and Ethics. We know the heavy silence. This silence, which was not able to dissipate until after the appearance of the book, was broadcast for decades, specifically since the early nineties and not before that.

Imaginary Mirrors in the Relationship Between East and West
Author: Dr. Essa Barhouma

This text prompts us to have issues: ancient, renewed, vague, manifest, complex, simplified, implicit, revealing, family. The author Professor Issa Odeh Barhouma in the Battle of Anunah for such a problematic text, as they are in mind; Within a calm, sober discussion of "relationship," the sensor is a master of interconnectedness and disharmony, cooperation and competition, coexistence and rivalry, openness and closure, acculturation and conflict between “the East” and “the West.”

Introduction

It is not repetitive to say that this book indicates that the expression of the importance of dialogue, and new conversations to resume it, in the shadows of global developments, and, major, surrounding humanity, all of the earth, and the West. States from turning around since the awakening of the world until this day, through a one-minute review that takes an objective one, examining its reminders, its causes, and the ways to get rid of it. He led me, made the world bigger, developed science, increased awareness, and there is no longer any vacant place, opportunity, or destructive wars, or Uncontrollable hate, says Nader Kazem
The Russian Quarter
Author: Khalil AL Rez
The Russian Quarter tells the story of a neighbourhood which for many years resists being dragged into the war going on around it, but is finally compelled to get involved. However, it enters the war with stories rather than weapons. Some of the book’s characters are a giraffe from the zoo, a poodle, a female Afghan hound and a sparrow made of wool. Its human ones include the narrator, a translator living in the zoo in the Russian quarter; Victor Ivanitch, a Russian former journalist and now manager of the zoo; Abu Ali Suleiman, French teacher and owner of a clothes shop; ‘Isam, a popular hero working in a cabaret; Rashida from Morocco, former oud player in the cabaret; Arkady Kuzmitch, a little-known Russian writer; and Nuna, daughter of a clarinet player, who knits wool and lives with the narrator in the zoo, and many others...

Wood of Sarajevo
Author: Said Khatibi
In Firewood of Sarajevo, Said Khatibi compares and contrasts the sad destinies of two countries. At one time tied by bonds of friendship and ideology, both have become embroiled in futile civil wars, descending into hell and reaching a state where pain is the only common denominator uniting people. In Algeria, as in Bosnia Herzegovina, the twentieth century had a bloody end, as people were torn apart by issues of religion and ethnicity. The novel’s protagonists, Salim and Ivana, have in common the fact that they have both fled destructive war and hatred in their countries, and gone to build a new life in Slovenia. Through them, the ugliness of conflict between brothers belonging to the same land is exposed, now brothers only in pain. Even in exile, the smell of war lingers in their nostrils and its effects are felt in their everyday lives.

Guard of the Dead
Author: Georges Yarak
Guard of the Dead is the story of Aabir, a hospital undertaker. Working in the morgue by day and the operating theatre by night, he learns to pluck out and sell the gold teeth he finds in the corpses’ mouths. However, he lives in a state of constant dread and apprehension, his past working for a political party and as a sniper during the Lebanese Civil War hanging over him. One day, Aabir is kidnapped from the morgue. With no idea about where he is, who has taken him or why, he finds himself searching for clues about his kidnapping in his past.

Summer with the Enemy
Author: Chahla Al Ojaily
Summer with the Enemy tells the story of Lamees, who having fled the war in her home country, arrives in the German city of Cologne to meet Nicholas, a lecturer at the University of Munich, who welcomes her and enables her to pursue her studies in Germany. In the 1980s, Nicholas followed in the footsteps of the Arab astronomer Al-Battani and spent a summer in Lamees’ home town of Raqqa in Syria. While doing research and surveying the sky, he met and fell in love with her mother Najwa. The courtship tortures Lamees and Nicholas became her sworn enemy. Through Lamees’ voice, who is in her thirties, we hear the story of three generations of women, and learn about the history of the Arab region and surrounding areas over the course of a century.

The Disappearance of Mr. Nobody
Author: Ahmed Tibawi
In the novel, the protagonist is caring for an old man who is suffering from Alzheimer’s. The old man dies, and an officer begins investigating the circumstances of his demise only to find that the man cannot be identified—he is a Mr. Nobody. Taibaoui uses the prism of the police novel (a genre well suited, on the face of it, for the casting of light into dark corners) but the further the detective delves into this world of poverty, marginalization, and decomposing bodies, the less sure he becomes of what he knows. From the somber but intense style, vivid characters emerge.
Bayaset El-Shawam
Author: Ahmad AL Fakharany

Bayaset El-Shawam (Syrian Square): The writer has chosen the name of a small district in Alexandria, Bayaset El-Shawam, or the Syrian Square, as the title of his novel. He has invented a magical world, as a small laboratory for the realm. The novel starts with the suicide of the main character’s mother. Mentally unstable, she is shouted at by her son, leading her to jump to her death. This incident triggers all the novel’s events and the existential questions.

The Drowning
Author: Hammour Ziada
The Drowning is Hammour Ziada’s third novel. With scarce descriptions, and just the minimal amount of words, Ziada succeeds in portraying very convincing characters, and in poignantly capturing the violence of social relations in a strictly codified society. Only 13 year-old Abeer eludes the reader. Like a dream all men try to catch throughout the novel, Abeer floats silently across town, a fluttering butterfly.

Selim El-Ashi Haters’ Association
Author: Sameh Algabas
The novel is about Selim or Dr. Dahesh, as he was called by followers. The name means the astonisher. His field was one of miracles and supernatural powers, and his legacy is establishing a religion unifying humanity as a whole. Dr. Dahesh’s influence needs to be researched with an unbiased mind to be detected in the work of our contemporary writers. El-Gabbas highlighted many lines in Naguib Mahfouz, Tewfik El-Hakim work that carry the obvious influence of Dr. Dahesh’s work.

The Corsair
Author: Abdulaziz Al Mahmoud

It’s the early part of the nineteenth century. The Arabian Peninsula and the waters surrounding it are ablaze. Piracy in the Gulf threatens global maritime trade routes while the Wahabbi strain of Islam is conquering followers town by town across the region. Britain, eager to reinforce its presence in the Middle East and protect the East India Company’s ships, sends a man-of-war to quash the pirates while persuading Egypt to join an international alliance with Oman and Persia to fight the Wahabbis.

This story of high-seas piracy and political intrigue, of unexpected kinship and personal betrayal, portrays the conflicting interests and human drama of these historic events in the Arabian Peninsula.

Ben Achour’s Family, A Journey into the Tunisian Thinking
Author: Lamia Laabidi
This book represents a journey in Tunisian thought through which we followed the evolution that took place between the individual tracks of the Ben Achour family and what was produced by the Tunisian cognitive and cultural scenes since the seventeenth century and to the limits of our time. After the concept of the scholarly family and the role of memory in its formation through its multiple mechanisms were questioned, the family path was reconstructed in a way that allowed the follow-up of how the cultural models and the difficult labor of the jurist’s offspring developed from the matrix of the guardian and then the world shivered from the matrix of the jurist, leading to the emergence of the educated.

Philosophy for Children and Young Adults, Literature and Strategies
Author: Mohi Eddine Klai
Perhaps one of the main reasons for the emergence of child-oriented philosophy is this peculiarity and complexity of the world of children, this mysterious and confusing possibility, which is omnipresent. These stark differences between children and the strange familiarity that exists between them is simple and extraordinary. The emergence of a child-oriented philosophy is not a temporary mode of thought, nor a fad or imitation, but a conscious and deliberate institutional trend. It is rather an established, conscious and intentional trend, and its solid basis is to treat children of modern societies from the diseases of these societies. It is not specified from the outset as an educational material approved by educational policies and contained in educational models, programs and books, but rather outside the closed educational spaces, in cultural spaces, in prisons and reformatories, in shelters, in parks, in some special centers for childcare, in the corridors of cities and their archaeological sites. This philosophy also derives its potential from the desire to immunize or protect children from every possible disease, disorder or psychological phobia.
Today's Philosophical Problem
Author: Mohamed Abu Hachem Mahjoub

Today’s philosophical problem bears a subtitle: Reflections on the Second Philosophy for Re-establishment. The reference is clear to Descartes' famous book (Meditations on First Philosophy), which is a fact that is hardly hidden from the immersed reader. This is a foundational book, then, carried by an intuition that has been with the author for decades: What are the possible contemporary conditions that allow us today to look at Western thought from our intellectual position? What is “today” to us? This question leads him to test today’s thinking within non-philosophical discourses that claim, however, that they are capable of answering it.

Prison Literature in Post-Revolution Tunisia Between the Ordeal of Writing and Writing the Ordeal
Author: Mohamed Toumi

In this book, the author is distinguished by his extensive knowledge of prison literature in Arab countries, from both sides: the creative and the critical, which led to his extensive knowledge of the Prison literature in Tunisia, and his accurate knowledge of many events that accompanied the circumstances. To his credit, he sought to find the thread that regulated all of that. He sought to uncover the literature of those texts and their ambiguous connection to neighbouring literary genres such as the novel, biography, memoirs, translations.

The Unfinished Works of Kevork Kassaryan
Author: Fadi Toufic
In 1981, a large caliber shell accidentally fell on Kevork’s apartment, igniting a ravaging fire. In the charred place, which he comes to inspect a few days later, Kevork realizes that he has just lost everything. All his possessions, his personal records, countless collector’s items, everything he had gathered over the years... There, as Kevork stands among the rubble of his charred house, it dawns upon him that there is no better or more appropriate incentive for a proper fresh start.

A Man Made of Satin
Author: Souhaib Ayoub

This novel is that of a Lebanese city, Tripoli, as well as that of a homosexual character, Nabil. On one side, a city full of contradictions; on the other, a marginalized character and, through him, that of minority entities in this urban mesh...

Despite very realistic scenes and subjects, this is not a novel about homosexuality. It is more of a historical novel that follows the tragic path of a man who has not managed to find his place in a discriminating Middle-East.

The Experience of Remorse
Author: Khalil Sweileh

The novel takes the reader inside the Syrian civil war and its devastating consequences on the country’s people and places. The protagonist is a brilliant writer who is navigating a new, war-torn reality. While reminiscing about his past, he shows us what everyday life is like in Damascus at once brutal and boring — and laments the missed opportunities in love and relationship and destruction the conflict has caused in his country.

My Palestinian Grandmother
Author: Hooda Al Shawwa
My Palestinian Grandmother, a book by Hooda Al Shawwa, delicately conjoins the missing pieces between two eras. It tells the story of Farida, a Palestinian girl living in Paris. Having a distinctive talent in painting, she is hired by Mr. Joaquim, who, as it turns out, intends to forge copies of original famous paintings, selling them as the authentic ones for his own profit. In the dreamlike Paris Farida lives in, she's enchanted by both the magic of the city and the feelings of estrangement that follows. Flowing unceasingly between the mystic present in Paris and the nostalgia of her homeland and family, she's constantly in touch with her grandmother Farida, who was forced to leave home to Syria in the Nakba of 48, and whom she was named after. Another person who greatly evokes tales of her homeland is Mazin, a Palestinian student whom she meets one day and finds a lot in common. Mazin also has his own account of his Grandmother Laila and a mysterious painting of hers drawn a long time ago by a famous painter. Mazin tries to unravel what happened to the painting and to claim the right of obtaining it as being the legal heir.
Farida, on the other hand, becomes increasingly fascinated with his story, only to learn later that it shares close crossings with her own

The Thunderbird (part two)
Author: Sonia Nemer
The Thunderbird (part two) is a novel by Sonia Nemer; the novel tackles the story of Noor, who was like any normal child, happy with her loving parents, great school and joyful friends. Until, two years ago, her world collapsed! She becomes an orphan in her uncle’s house, unwanted, living in a horrible school with no friends. The only source of love is her grandmother, who dies and leaves her alone. Later, fires and demons come and Noor has a responsibility to save the world while she tries to convince herself that all of this is a bad dream. Sonia won the 2018 Arabic Young Adult Book Award for her young adult novel, "Thunderbird part 1," at the tenth Sharjah Children’s Reading Festival.

Coming in Spring
Author: Amira Al- Modhi
A work that hides in it a lot of love and a lot of sadness and disappointment. The love that developed between “Dalal” and Ali Al-Sayed “Hamed”, as fate brought them together after a short meeting at Cairo Airport, remains reminiscent in the memory.
Comment
The book is an act of objection against those restrictions that have crushed our freedoms, since it touches an area that may be important in the history of our Islamic and social heritage.

Samson and an Apple
Author: Amir Tujul Sir

The novel talks about the story of Khadija Saad, a girl in her thirties who refuses to marry, and gets acquainted with a person named Samsoun, who compares her to apples, and she keeps waiting for him, but she waits with no end.

Comment
The novel is a revolutionary book since it focuses on the story of the Sudanese society and the marginalized class under a dictatorial rule.
Suleiman Al-Ja’i: An Al-Dahek wa Al-Buka fi Filistin
Author: Hakam Abdelhadi
A narrative of the social reality in Palestine in the late Ottoman era up to the full Israeli occupation of Palestine in 1967. The story sheds light on the life of a traditional Palestinian family. The author, Hakam Abdelhadi, was born and bred in Jenin; he travelled in 1958 to Germany to pursue his studies and worked with Deutsche Welle. The novel was first published in German in 2010 (Der hungrige Suleiman. Vom Lachen und Weinen in Palästina). At the time of the novel, Palestine was still under British Mandate and is father earned a living as a court clerk, to sustain a family of twelve. The story is based on Abdelhadi’s own biography; to which he gave such a rare name. On the one hand, Palestinian history is condensed into family history; on the other hand, family history is broadening into Palestinian history. Hunger plays a key role on both levels. We follow Suleiman’s insatiable appetite and know that the famine and hunger in Palestine in the 1910s was a fact, not only as hunger for lack of food and drink, but also as hunger for possession or rebellion over the lost homes and estates. Hakam Abdelhadi masterfully employed his family history to take us on a journey in the history of Palestine and how each sphere affected the other. In between two world wars, a story begins to lead us to our modern time as if the author is saying: there will be rest.

Shahrazad’s Confessions
Author: Moslih Kanaaneh
Collection of short stories, fiction based on real life.
This collection contains eight short stories varying in size between 2 and 43 pages. Six of the stories deal with woman’s situation and life hardships stemming from deeply-seated gender inequality in the Arab masculine society just emancipating from the colonial condition, while simultaneously dwelling on larger issues such as cultural anomaly, retreat of peasant life, manipulation of history and historical accounts, impact of globalization and the social media, and the conflict-ridden relationship between East and West. The stories are written in a highly literary form, making usage of the special esthetics and expressive capabilities of the Arabic language. The remaining two stories deal with rather different philosophical issues.

Islam From Within
Author: Jabra Shomali
The book is an analytical reading of the history of Islam in its most prominent historical stations: The state of Madina, the Rashidun Caliphate, the Umayyad Caliphate, the Abbasid Caliphate, in the context of addressing the main categories in Islamic thought, especially the categories of jihad - women - veil - polygamy, on the basis of a new and different perspective on the modernist and Salafi perspectives in reading stations and concepts.

Commentary by the writer Mashhour Batran: How I wished to be the owner of this book, I was reading, learning and changing and I was fascinated by this book. I read the book carefully and had the honor of presenting it at the book launch event.

Commentary by Dr. Qusta Mannuel: The book is a bold book. The writer took bumpy paths, put his hand on issues that were not discussed, and presented Islam as it is in history without exaggeration or flattening.

Ideological Moderation and Its Impact on Protecting Mankind
Author: Dr. Sa‘id ibn Ahmad Abo ‘Isab

A firmly established study in the light of the Islamic texts aiming, through ideological moderation, at creating cultural awareness based on respecting the human, defending his legitimate rights, protecting his interests, and seeking his stability. The study presents a definition of the concepts of ideological moderation and clarifies its fundamentals and manifestations in the sight of Islamic law. Moreover, the study shows its impacts and positive outcomes on Muslims and non-Muslims in regards to coexistence, accepting the other, moderation, and recognizing the other, in addition to its impacts on all the fields whether scientific, ideological, social, economic, etc.

Planning and Construction in Islamic Jurisprudence
Author: Dr. Zakariya Al-Murabit

This book tackles the scientific problems that badly affect the Islamic architecture with an attempt to understand the deviation that occupies it, search for a rational procedure for its remedy, and detect the fundamentals, rules, and regulations that controlled and that must control the planning and construction of the cities. In addition, it highlights the role of such fundamentals in giving the society an Islamic nature, to make the architecture a true expression of Islam and a production that highly reflects its ethics and morals while being open to the architecture of the other cultures, benefiting from them to the extent permitted by the legal laws in the light of laying the foundation of Islamic architectural science.
The Clear Quran
A Thematic English Translation
Translator: Dr. Mustafa Khattab
We are pleased to present this accurate, smooth, and eloquent translation to highlight the greatness of the Holy Quran and the universality of Islam. The translation remedied a lot of mistakes caught in the preceding translations whether in regards to understanding the quranic statements or conveying them in English. Moreover, this translation is distinguished by being the first thematic translation in which verses have been grouped and titled based on their themes for a comprehensive understanding of the meanings of each surah. In addition, it has been widely accepted by Al-Azhar, the Canadian Council of Imams, and a lot of scholars of Da’wa in the west.

Islamic Theory in Languages’ Origin and Evolution
Author: Dr. Fakhr Al-Din Qabawa
The personalities, views, and tastes of the Arab generations degenerated. Therefore, it was impossible for the mentors to control the spread of deterioration, so they had to keep pace with reality to guide the people going ahead in the spheres of life. The present generations became satisfied by the trivial matters. Consequently, this state led them to follow a small number of novellas, anecdotes, and games. It became obligatory for us to present for them what resembles the opposite.

This book is one of series of purposeful lore books titled “Cultural Trends and Instructions,” which contains what fulfills the need for knowledge in a vaccine of health and growth.

Antar And Abla at Selfie’s Century
Author: Sana Shabbani

This story was born in special circumstances, after the artists Hassan Edilbi and Wafaa Sharaf drew forty art paintings on the historical couples Antara Bin Shaddad and Abla, and presented it within the activities of the Sharjah International Forum for Narrators, organized by the Sharjah Institute for Heritage under the slogan “Al Seerat and Al Melhem”. The debate between the three is about complementing the visual text that the artists wrote in a story they write. The author chose seventeen paintings in which she laid out her vision for the path of the exploration of the duo Antara and Abla. Will Angie learn to accept Sama and appreciate her uniqueness?

Sabah el 25 min shaher December: The Morning of the Twenty Fifth of December
Author: Yahya Ashour

I have experienced the two faces of absence, O mother. Throughout motherhood, I have lived them in two contradictory, separate but chronological ways during which presence and absence were synonymous. In both cases, I did not associate absence with you, O Suknah. You lived in opposites: as a mother completely held fast to her motherhood, as she made her name, her secret, and her inevitable order. I borrowed from you what fire takes out of a spark, and what love takes out of devotion. In both cases, I knew nothing of motherhood but the dissonance of opposites that negate and curse each other. Between my first experience and I, I casted blind veils; while my second experience saw me remove all veils, as if I could not stand the alliance of opposites. Thus, I fled from my shortcomings to run towards self-retribution, like the fearful escapes from one sin to another!

Al Rewaya Al Aamyaa: A Blind Man’s Tale
Author: Shaker Nouri

I was terrified at first when I suddenly found myself living among the blind. I had lost my sight, but, just like them, I still enjoyed my foresight. Nine months with them felt like a lifetime, yet I wept at the thought of leaving them behind, and agonized at the idea of turning my back on a happiness I would never have known. For, I would not have been fascinated by beauty had it not been for the lovely “Hayat”, nor would I have realized the meaning of resemblance without the imitations of “Zeybak”, nor would I have been delighted with the rhythm of music had it not been for the singer “Fridoun”, nor would I have become charmed by the magic of words had it not been for the writer “Burhan”, nor would I have felt colors had it not been for the artist “Sargin”, nor would I have admired the greatness of memory had it not been for the reading boy, nor would I have discovered female deception had it not been for the temptress “Sultana”, nor would I have been ecstatic with the splendor of the body had it not been for the dancer “Milad”.

Tarikh el Fan w el Aamara: The History of Art and Architecture
Author: Dr. Samar El Shamsi and Mr. Ali Abd el Rahman Debaja

Through great detail and elaborate models, this book explores how art, buildings, furniture, and more have developed throughout history, from the pharaohs and Greeks to modern times; and how people managed to combine both beauty and utility.

“The History of Art and Architecture” includes hundreds of models that show how styles differed between one civilization and another, an era and another. “For what purpose?” you may ask. Well, it’s for showing the differences between civilizations.

The book includes most of the big names whom have put their distinctive touches on both art and architecture. Thanks to their immortal works, they not only have become renowned to mankind, but throughout all ages as well.

Tahounat Jaddi: My Grandfather’s Windmill
Author: Nadine Bakhos

Rather than being a tale about an old and rarely used mill, this is a story that combines beautiful memories and a vast imagination that, one day, turned into a reality. So here’s to, a train track that disappeared one fateful night, a man moving a windmill without even touching it, girls turning into flowers... and a caring grandfather who loved stories and telling them to his granddaughter. Farida, on the other hand, becomes increasingly fascinated with his story, only to learn later that it shares close crossings with her own.

Fi Raasi Nagham: Melodies in My Head
Author: Nadine Bakhos

Every night, right before he falls asleep, countless melodies fill Kamal’s head. One night, he snuck out of bed and headed to the piano to play them. His father and mother awoke to the sound of him playing, and their neighbor knocking on their door. Did their neighbor report it to the police? Was everyone complaining about the melodies, or were they eagerly waiting for the boy to play?

OMG! Rooster is looking after his chicks? Where's the chicken mother?

This is what most of animal farms kept gossiping when they saw a rooster wandering in the fields with his chicks taking care of them and teaching them what to do to survive, grow, and be independent. But the rooster did not care and disregarded the animals' comments; after all, he has never been more proud of his behavior and deeds than now.

Join us in reading a story about a rooster and his chicks in their journey to the fields; a story that teaches us love, cooperation, and shakes stereotypes of expected gender roles and introduces the notion of death in a smooth and subtle way with enormous amounts of love going forever and much light of optimism at the end of the tunnel.

Arabic Names: Sources, Meaning and Direction
Author: Dr. Atef Attieh
There is no human without a name. It does not matter if that name is a sign, a title, or a simile. Its necessity is no less important than the existence of the body and the soul. Moreover, the name remains, in this world at least, because the soul departs, and the body perishes. As for the name, it is possible, or even necessary, for it to reappear, only as itself, in a body descending from the one that has disappeared, with a new soul that has emerged from God, and from the ancestor that has gone, or is on the verge of going. Therefore, the name remains alive, even if the soul is gone by death, and the body dissolves by the departure of the soul. The name remains and is more viable, as long as its bearer marries, reproduces, and secures the continuity of life, after him, in his children, grandchildren and offspring. Thus transferring the names from generation to generation by repetition, in order to preserve the survival of parents and grandparents in the family, by symbolism and loyalty, to remember and link the present with the past, repairing to join the future with the present and the past altogether.

Snakes of Fire
Author: Jalal Barjas
There is a story. When the plane flies in the air, stare at the houses from above. In each house, there is a story. As you go higher and higher, look at the cities as chapters of the story, then close your eyes to realize that life is a story that has not yet ended.

This is what comes to Khater's mind as he wrote his novel. Then, he lost his manuscript in sudden fire. By coincidence, he found his novel being narrated in a street under an ancient mulberry tree, told by a woman who tells stories to children every day. The woman is telling the story of a man and a young girl who long for a life, as if had not lived before, in a world that still imposes rules prohibiting everything. The story starts with a whispered word, paths are paved and then diverge, but meet in the end. The story of Khater meets the stories of Ali Bin Mahmoud Al Qassad and the storyteller, Barea where their destinies fail in life, except for love, which is the only enduring front.

Mayhoud and the Jinni
Author: Dr. Ahmed Abdel Malek
Aggrieved and rejected, Mayhoud despairs of the human world and steps into the jinn world to escape the hallucinations and delusions he suffered from throughout his life. The novel's narrative extends for over 60 years full of surprises and disappointments. Mayhoud symbolizes those who fight tooth and nail for a better tomorrow. However, relentless storms tear his hopes apart and his dreams crash on the hard rock of reality.
Princess Shadow
Author: Mustapha El Hamdaoui
The novel deals with the early period of Romans in the middle and west of Algeria and eastern Morocco. Through imaginary memories, it tracks the first trials of the Amazigh to face the Roman existence before Christ. Anir, the handsome Amazigh young man, met Sanis, the daughter of military commander Aurelius, when the Roman army passed by Deriu town on its way to defeat the rebellions of the Amazigh Kingdom of Masisilia. Sanis will like the young man who will give her a basket of roasted chestnuts as a gift. As a reward, she will invite him to visit the city of Arto. Through its intensive events, the novel reflects the pains of the people and their hope that the sun of freedom will rise in their country, referred to as Goddess Thafosht, that Master Masin asked to be delivered to Anir; the symbol of salvation. As incidents move on, we discover the love of some Amazigh wise men for reading and philosophical arguments. The Amazigh Master Masin will tell his smart young student about the necessity of facing the Roman occupation. Anir will leave the country and head to Arto, as a step towards achieving his tutor’s ambitions, and on the other side, he was motivated by his hidden love for the beautiful Roman lady. Amazigh will come to life after Sanis got pregnant from Anir.

At the Gates of El- Mahrousaa
Author: Abdelmomen Ahmed AbdelAal
Three hit-and-run journeys, both disparate and intersecting. “Halim coming from the kingdom of Karaj, "Geishana", the Tatar princess from "Karakorum", and "jabber", who escaped from "Baghdad" after the fall of the Abbasid Caliphate> The sorrows of “Halim” are renewed after the fall of Baghdad, as he remembers his family and relatives who were treacherously burned by the Tatars in the Ateni Sioni cathedral in the western district of Tbilisi. Therefore, he decides to flee to the Egyptian land and join the Royal Postmen. The Tatar princess, who went out with her brother Jumtai to avenge her father’s killers with a convoy of merchants in Otrar, converts to Islam and decides to help the Egyptian Army, so she sends money and news to Sheikh Al-Izz. Jaber, the son of the head of the water carriers, escapes from Baghdad to Aleppo, participates in resisting the Tatars, then gets arrested by the leader of the castle. A Tatar princess sets him free, and he falls in love with her. He continues to flee, joins the Egyptian army, and returns to fight the Tatars and take revenge for his family and relatives.

The novel deals with the challenges faced by a Palestinian man and his family, especially in Kuwait. The mother, Hajar, is the centerpiece of the family. She migrated with her daughter to Jordan during the 1967 setback. Abdel Rahman, her husband who works in Kuwait, leaves for Jordan to search for them and decides to take them back to Kuwait to join thousands of Palestinian families settled in Kuwait, until the invasion of Iraq makes them leave Kuwait forever.

The novel highlights the characteristics of a Palestinian woman represented by Hajar, in addition to a number of characteristics the Palestinians are known for and the nature of their relationship with others. It also documents an era in Kuwait’s history when it was habitual to see a mix of Arab families, producing a unique diversity in population and culture. The novel depicts many details of this era, most notably the social cohesion among the various nationalities living in Kuwait, and deals with a number of events and political turning points experienced by Palestinians in particular and the Arab nation in general. The question remains:

Where do Palestinians go?
